Dad You Mean More To Me

Dad you have given me so much,
and have so little in return.
You guided me, but you let me go my own way.
You set a fine example,
as you patiently taught me your lessons in life.
You taught me to be strong-
strong enough to cope with disappointments
and hard times and strong enough to live with any weakness I may have.

You taught me courage - to be brave enough to do what I believe is right.

You taught me the value of knowledge –
so that I would be prepared to make decisions, Big and small – so that when I made mistakes, I would try to learn from them, and then go on from there.

Often I find myself thinking of you Dad... of the support,
and encouragement you've given me over the years,
Of your generosity, kindness and guidance, and especially of the many talks we've had together,
And its when I think of these things, that I realize how much it has helped me to know that you have had many of the same dreams and doubts that I've had in my life.

But most of all. Dad, you taught me about love,
by setting an example with your own gentleness
and openness and warmth.

You have enriched my life forever,
with your lessons and your love....
And I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

Dad, you have made me proud and happy
to have a Dad, as fine as you.
